WE CARE ABOUT EACH OTHER

Who Cares? Or, more importantly, why do they care? The Class of 2004 has undeservedly earned a reputation of not caring; yet over the last four years many members of this class have lent their efforts to numerous activities. In academics, sports, and clubs, this class excels. In the arena of student government, the role of class president demands a year long commitment and much effort. At the yearbook staff's request, the four leaders that served in this position agreed to explain why they cared enough to invest their time and energy in a class they cared so much about, the Class of 2004.

"Why shouldn't I?"

2000-2001
Nancy Brulé

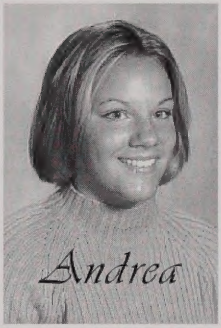
My response to the question--"Why did you care about your class?"--was, "Why shouldn't I?" After all, my class was made up of my friends, my peers, and people I cared about. My parents taught me to jump at every opportunity I had to change the world, so I ran for class president. I did my best to make our freshman year enjoyable as well as profitable. Although I didn't make a great impact on the world, I gave the Class of 2004 the boost it needed to start a successful high school career. We did a few fundraiser, such as the Battle of the Bands, that I believe brought out the character of the true leaders in our class. Not many people attended, but those who did care enough to join the fun were mostly people who ended up participating on student council at one time or another. The effect teamwork had on us was remarkable. Over all, freshman year was a great learning experience, but I couldn't have made the small impact that I did without the help of the other officers. I owe a lot of thanks to Lisa, Shane, Kate, and Mr. Glover. I'd relive it all if I could.

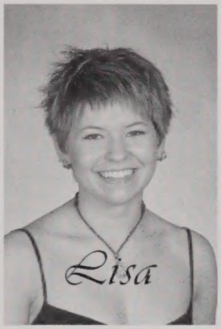
2001-2002
Andrea Sarvela

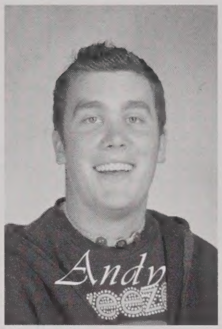
I, Andrea Sarvela, ran for class president because, well, basically I didn't trust anyone else. I mean, the world does revolve around me, and since I had the opportunity to tell people what to do, and have things done my way, then why the heck not? Whoa! Who says that? That's not me at all! I ran because I wanted to help, but I never thought that I would actually win. I love being involved, so I figured I'd give it a shot. When I heard my name over the loudspeaker, I almost fell over. Right at that moment I started thinking about what the heck I was going to say at graduation (mind you this was the end of my freshman year.) Who does that? The Class of 2004 is so unique. Every face, every personality, and every voice makes our class the wonder that it is. And, we are wonderful. We're enthusiastic! While everyone else is cheering for the number of points that they receive for Spirit Week, here we are cheering for the number of points we don't have! Now, if that's not unique, I don't know what is. I'm proud, to say the least, that I was rewarded the honor of being class president (and it sure wasn't easy!) We have school spirit, whether we want to admit it or not. So, if anyone ever asks, "Who cares?" you can count on me to have my hand in the air--both hands in the air!

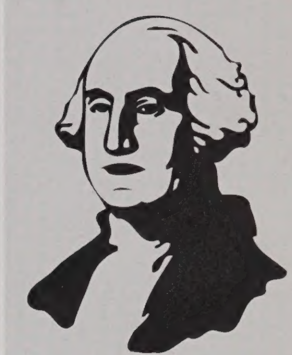
"The Class of 2004 is so unique."

THE CLASS OF 2004: CLASS PRESIDENTS









2002-2003 Lisa Azzolino

It's hard to pinpoint a real reason why I care. It's just something that comes naturally. You care about groups that you're a part of. I saw that my class needed a morale boost, and that it would have to be quick if we were going to have a good Prom and enough money left over to start off our senior year with a lot of fun. I felt up to the challenge. Running for class president and spending a year in office was, for me, a way of helping out my friends. With the help of all my friends and peers, we had a really successful year. The credit , though, has to go mainly to the class for being so willing to help out. At events like the Holdiay Bazaar and the Silent Auction, an overwhelming majority of Juniors showed up to lend a hand. I feel like last year was the start of something really good for our class, in the sense of both commitment and unity. While I regret not being able to lead the Class of 2004 through our final year at LHS, I'm thankful for the year I did get, and I'm confident that Andy will continue to help our class act as one. In doing so he will help make our senior year a truly fun and memorable one.

"last year was the start of something really good"

2003-2004 Andrew Thibeault

Three years, three different presidents for the Class of 2004. In the spring of 2003, I discovered it was my turn to lead this motley crew to graduation. Needless to say, I was nervous. My three predecessors were all well suited for the presidency. Until the fall, I had no idea what events would take place to test my nerves, my steely resolve, and my blood pressure. Could there be a political giant hiding beneath my not-so-serious surface? Why would I even bother? All I was going to do is make myself constantly busy. I decided right then ant there why I cared so much about being class president. On the one hand, I wanted to set an example for future presidents follow. I believe that fun should be weighed just as heavily as getting the job done, as long as you actually get that job done. I want to leave a mark on this school: a mark that people will respect and emulate. On the other hand, this was the final year that the colorful characters that make up the Class of 2004 would grace the halls of LHS as students, and I wanted to take full advantage of our final year. In nine short months, we would say goodbye to this chapter of our lives. I was determined to do everything in my power to squeeze every ounce of fun out of this group, and doing so, some serious, hardcore unification would result. The truth is that I don't care about being president as much as I care about every single person in this class. Anything more that I could come up with to say would be overkill. In short, all my friends, the Class of 2004, are the people providing me with the fuel to care. This class is a car made out of solid dream that runs on 100% unleaded starshine.

"I care about every single person in this class."

Foreign Language Festival

March 19, 2003

Once every year, students at LHS have a Foreign Language Festival to help raise money for the Bookbag Scholarship, available to any student who has taken a language all four years. They do this by selling food and showing off their musical and artistic talents.

We're in Paris, France! Well, kind of. Wit

classmates put together a quaint Frenc

A Lil' Italy in Lil'ton. Juniors Colleen Cannistraro, Julia McGrath, and Rebecca O'Donnell are ready to serve "American" portions two of the popular Italian dishes they've prepared to all the hungry customers.

Interactive Eating? People of all ages get a taste of the many cultures in the world. Going "backstage" with servers Erin Austin and Alissa Palange, two happy little customers, Erin's sisters, receive some special treatment.

Literally translated, "La Comida Espanola" is "Spanish food." Indeed, Heather Trumbull, Emily Coole, Emily Zimmerman, and Jen Morse had Spanish food including cocoa and rice pudding, popular desserts enjoyed by all.

Junior Matt O'Donnell is ready to serve up some exotic Cambodian food. On this fun yet educational night, many people ventured to try out a few different flavors of food for the first time.

Working on the piñata and the cafe was "lots of hard work preparing for it," according to Mike Morin, "but," he adds, "it was fun seeing how it all turned out in the end." He got first place for his pinata of a seven foot long dragon. Nice work!

The Senior Girls line up for the camera and smile their biggest smiles on Prom night. Dresses of all different materials, colors, prices, and styles are showcased by these girls.

Aww...don't be sad! Number thirty-two, Krystle Heighes has a puppy face on, a rare sight to see, especially after having tried the exquisite Italian buffet available on this enchanting night.

Here's to the Night

Prom Queen Nancy Brule comments on her prom experience, "It was a lot of fun, everyone looked amazing, and it was just an awesome time all around." Enjoying this special dance with Jeff Townley, Prom King, Nancy was all smiles this magical night.

Three lucky men waiting in line to see if they get voted on for the Prom Court. Joe Graham, Steve Donnelly, and Alex Brown all seem styled and confident as prom night goes late into the night. We're certain their dates miss their good company.

Is that Michael Jackson? No! It's Matt Coole doing an impressive impression of the famous pop icon. At the Prom, not only was music entertaining, but the dance performances were as well.

Here's to the Night Prom 2003

Magic and romance filled the grand Wyndham Hotel on the night of Prom 2003. On and off the dance floor, hidden talents were revealed and instant connections were made. Indeed, the May 9th, 2003Prom experience can be deemed unforgettable.

Matthew Saylor and Chrissy Mohamed are huddled close, enjoying each other's company. Prom seems to be the perfect opportunities for couples to share the spotlight.

Jaime Nichols and Beth O'Clair happily dance to one of the songs provided by the DJ. The other 150 people who attended also enjoyed themselves this night whether by dancing, chatting, or just having a good time with their friends.

Homecoming

Every year at LHS, we have a "homecoming" consisting of a pep rally for all the fall sports, followed by the homecoming football game, the dance, parade, and lastly, the carnival. It takes a lot of organizing and hard work, but it all pays off in the end. Look at all those happy faces!

Despite the rainy weather, there was still a decent turnout after the postponement the week before. People kept the carnival cheery through it all. Kim Scantlebury waves from under her umbrella at the field hockey booth.

"When I was in high school," says Chef Jason, "homecoming was a glazed over event with little importance. However, in Littleton it's very spirit-orientated and brings the faculty, sports teams, the band, and the student body together."

Alissa Palange, Gabrielle Connelly, Kristin Falk, and Lizzy Cherneff pose in front of the Cotillion poster. These sophomore girls show up in their best attire.

Shane Melone shows up to Cotillion with not one, but four dates! Nicole Puopolo, Kim Riker (his real date), Rebecca Rooks, and Kim Hardy still enjoyed the night although most of their dates were at basketball or hockey games.

Samone Tuttle and Dan Weise slow it down during the dance whil listening to the great tunes provided by Crystal Entertainmen Services. This service also provided the music for the Halloween Dance in 2003.

The comedic duo of Andy Thibeault and Pat Lento break it down by showing off their best moves and entertaining fellow classmates. They sure look like they are having a good time!

Winter Cotillion

December 19, 2003

The Cotillion is a semi-formal dance held in the high school cafeteria every winter for grades 9-12. Organized and decorated by Student Council, the dance has always been a big hit with the students.

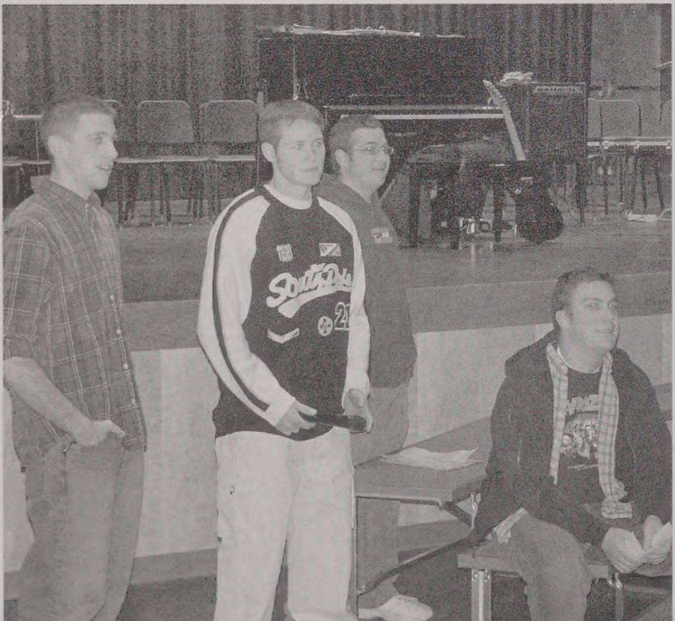
Many new couples appeared together at this year's Cotillion. Enjoying each other's company are Colleen Cannistraro and Joe Faherty, Mike Azzolino and Abbie Morse, and Katie Abruzzese and Mark Fidler.

Dancing the night away and having a fun time at it, these freshmen girls appear to be all smiles tonight. Freshmen are often the class with the highest attendance to these school social events.

A Look at 2003-2004 Half-Day Activities

On half-day Wednesdays at LHS, everyone gathers in the auditorium to be together while students make special announcements, present awards, and enjoy entertainment like music provided by students and faculty alike.

Frank Tringale and And Thibeault read off the mornin announcements at the all-schoo assemblies. On this day, Fran fills in for Andrea Sarvela wh usually plans the meetings wit Andy.



The class officers listen as Mr. Buckey talks about caps and gowns at the Senior Class meeting in the auditorium. In preparation for graduation, these four will play an important role in planning the class gift and the senior trip

In the Kiva, class president, Colette Chandonait and class advisor, Ms. Price inform the Junior Class of the upcoming school events. Also serving as head of Prom Committee, Colette uses this time to vote on things concerning the prom.

Meeting in the gym, the Sophomore Class listens as their officers explain plans for the upcoming Valentine's Day carnation sale. They also smile to learn that their class rings will be delivered soon.

Josh Leger takes the lead in singing Glycerine and Mr. Lynn takes his turn while singing Johnny Cash. This band, Shepherd's Pie, and many others, entertain the student body at the beginning and end of the half-day assemblies.

This Freshman Class is off to a good start with fund-raising since they had a booth at the Homecoming Carnival. At this meeting in the cafeteria, they work out the final details on their plan to hold a school wide matchmaker service as another fundraiser.

Mr. D

For years, Mr. Desaulniers and Fernando have entertained students and shared important information with the audience through their short skits. Who can forget the continual rivalry between Red Sox fan, Mr. D. and Yankee loyal, Fernando? Not us!

Abbie Morse and Mark Fidler sing to the piano music while rehearsing for their parts in Bye Bye Birdie. Working very hard to make this play a hit, these cast members rehearse at least three times a week for two hours at a time!

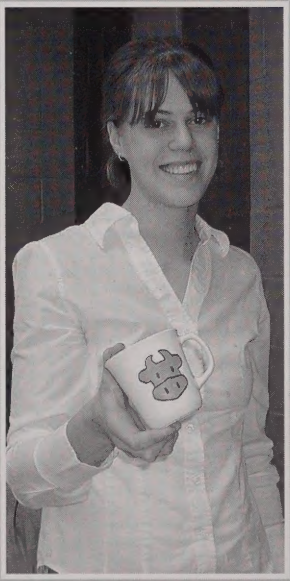
Blue Cow Press

Showcasing the Blue Cow logo on the cup, Bailey Chick, one of the behind the scene members, exclaims that the show is a sort of "organized chaos." For homeroom, she gets to enjoy being in this laid back and funny environment everyday.



BLUE COW PRESS

Eric Greenaway, Matt Coole, Shane Melone, Bailey Chick, and Andy Thibeault work together to paint the set of Blue Cow TV. On the homeroom morning show, Matt Coole and Andy Thibeault announce meetings and perform wacky stunts to start the day off.

Outside the auditorium, Alissa Palange refreshes her memory by skimming over lines for the musical. In this production parodying the popularity of Elvis' life, Alissa plays the part of Rosie, a fiesty girl who just wants to marry her beau.

Performing Arts Productions

Contributing to the diversity in the school, students are given the opportunity to display their talent at LHS by putting on productions for all types of audiences, whether it's Bye Bye Birdie, Blue Cow TV, or simply a skit for Shaker Lane.

Pink Friday

Laura Irwin and Amy Rodgers have fun while going over the lines of the play that they are performing for the students in Shaker Lane. We're sure the children will be pleased to find out about this special treat!

The Performing Arts Club Presents Carnival Day!

The whole gang of the Performing Arts Club poses together for a picture with a sign for their play. Their show is called Carnival Day, and it teaches children not to be snobby. They are very eager to present it to their young audience.

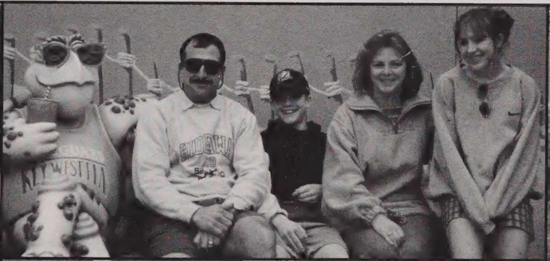
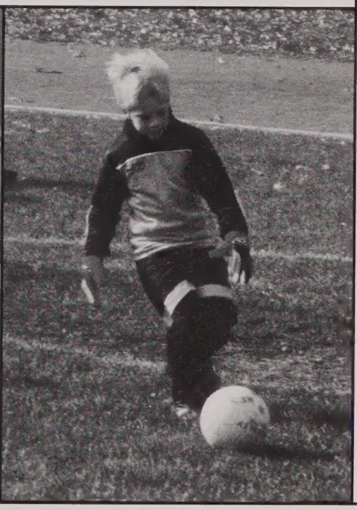
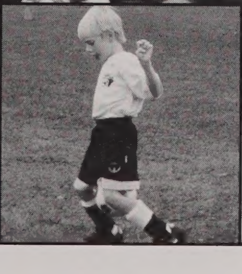
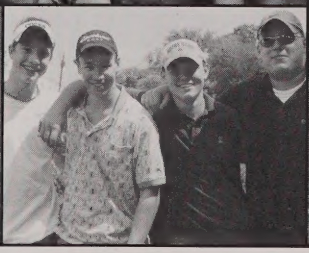
Greg Cares!

When the Class of 2004 was short of their goal of $9,000 in ad sales, Greg set out and raised nearly $2,000 himself. For his effort, the yearbook has given him this page!









costume day

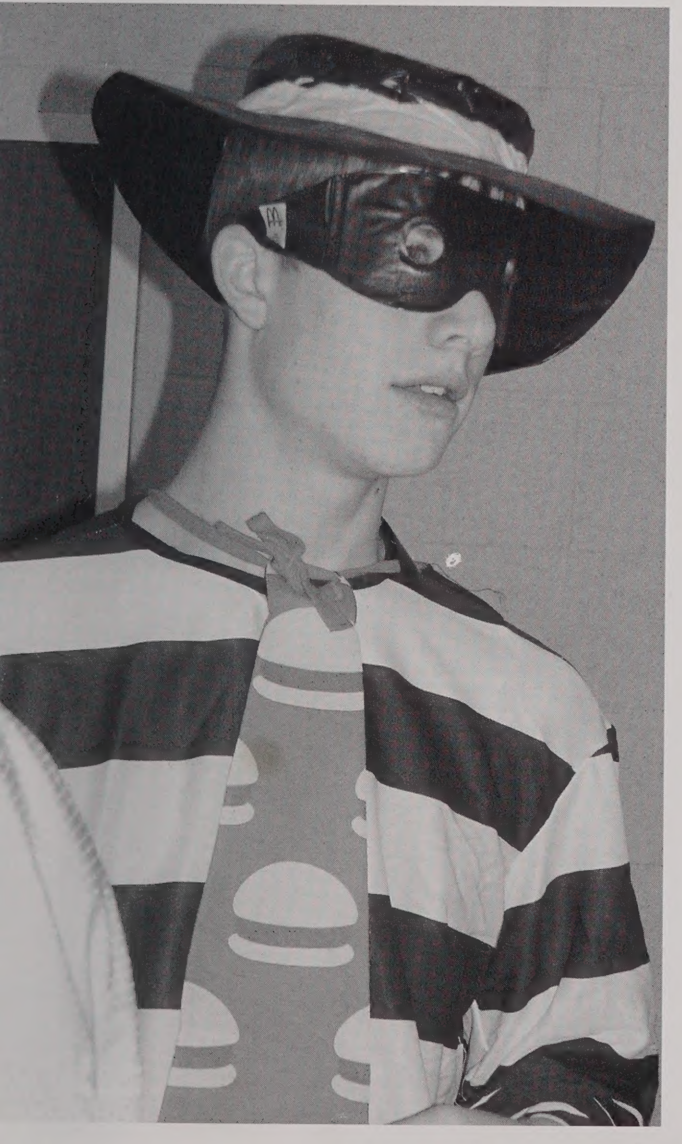
HALLOWEEN, 2003

Nick Scott and Ramone Torres look on with amusement at the antics of their fellow classmates. The two seniors decided to observe the parade from a prime spot in the cafeteria.

Los Dos Amigos, Erick Clerico and Jeff Loven, look as if they are part of a mariachi band performing at a Mexican restaurant. Instead of sweet sounding music, however, these two are just handing out sweets.

The fun and joy of Costume Day! Laura Irwin and Kim Scantlebury are full of enthusiasm as they prepare to toss candy to masses who line the halls--both students and staff!

Where's the candy?! Juniors Emily Zimmerman and Jenn Morse peer down the hall, waiting for the Senior Parade to begin, knowing that it won't be long until they'll be the ones dressed in costume.



Watch out, Ronald McDonald! The Hamburgler is around! Greg Mauro's not going to steal hamburgers today--there are too many candy treats to be enjoyed!

Legally Blonde's Elle Woods visits Rome? That's the scenario that seems to be playing out as Shane Melone and Kim Hardy make their way through the parade. (Hmm, who has the shorter hemline?)

I, Rebecca Nichols, leave Gerilyn Kinch or rather everyone that has to deal with her a bottle of aspirins and Megan Smith the rest of my COED and all our experiences at bells. I, Beth O'Clair, leave Lynne and Craig more joyous years in this school, and HP all my love and luck in your remaining 2 years here. I, Stephanie Oder, leave Billy three more years, Alissa a trophy, Jess my jumps, and Lizzy without a stunt group. I, Andrew Oldenquist, leave Mark, Pat, and JJ the zaniest memories that we had, the bus, and of course the implausibility of Steve Leone, thanks for the times guys. I, Nicole Puopolo, leave Alissa Palange and Erin Austin jointly, the legacy of the "Ultimate Cheerleader"; and HP to "rockstop". I, Leaness Ramos, leave Mer 2 more years, movies and get in' clothes. Va-Va to carry on our minority power, an extra cell and 1 more year. Britney and Molly can keep my voice alive in chorus. Jaime 1 more year and my friendship. I, Andrea Sarvela, leave Ashely Dutcher 5 candles on her next birthday cake, Jen Morse the legend of the Rodeo, Dave Morse the wedding plans, Erica Crory a pact for life, and KPJ #15. I, Sakhorn Sath, leave Littleton high school to be an Auto Mechanic and maybe one day I could fix your car. For now, all I can do is wait. I, Kim Scantlebury, leave Greg Tuesday, Thursday, Sunday, and the bathroom. Molly and Robbie camping in Gloucester. I, Meghan Scully, leave Caite two more years and the car if it lasts that long, Michelle Serio, the lack of a twin, Varsity field hockey to the next seniors and my goalie pads to the goalies to come. I, Kristen Smith, leave Samone Tuttle a set of car keys, Alissa Palange a penguin named Albert, and Lizzy Chernoff a set of heart stickers and a zebra named Zelo. I, Rebecca Smith, leave Geri the sisterhood, Jenna a stick and the legend of "the nice girl," and Erin the ability to land her jumps. I, Andy Thibeault, leave the rocking up to Mark Fidler, Ali Theriault control of the tribe, and Kim Martel the legacy of following in my athletic footsteps. I, Jeff Townley, leave JJ all the memories that he has taken from my house, Beth 3 more years, J Gibs a "blessing", Mazzolino an Oh No Tigas and good luck to the football team. I, Frank Tringale, leave "I don't like Buffalo" to Trumbull, Enhanced Mimicking to whomever can pick it up. My stunning looks and my street smarts to all Lowell visitors. I, Rachel Tuttle, leave Dargin a bruise, HP a red rag top, JP a gock, and Samone 2 more years and the house to herself. I, Sophy Tuttle, leave Alison K my life story, Coolege without a British Goddess, Mike one more long year, and the Field Hockey and Track teams the best of luck – not that they need it. I, Melissa Whalen, leave Co and Ag a fun senior year, SPFL, KPJ and LKV my luck and love, JMO another year as captain,and girls varsity soccer good luck in the future.

Administration and Staff

As part of the greater community, the faculty at Littleton High School works to maximize the intellectual, social, physical, and emotional growth of all its students. The administration and staff maintain a safe evironment where students are free to learn and grow in a place where they feel valued and respected. Together with students, teachers, parents, and the community, the faculty helps students to become life-long learners and self-reliant, responsible, productive citizens in a constantly changing world.

Along with Chef Jason, the cafeteria ladies work hard to prepare breakfast and lunch for the LHS community. The staff includes Jean Witchie, JoAnn Lyon, and Andrea Alvarado.

English

The English teachers and the curriculum they teach care to instruct Littleton students in the ares of composition, literature, grammer, and vocabulary. This is done by placing great empasis on written compositions that improve students' communication skills, and their ability to think critically and analytically. Offered at Littleton are Honors, Academic, and Essentials English I, II, III, and IV. Also in the English curriculum is a senior AP English class, and Drama and Theatre classes.

Meghan Scully learns to write her college essay in her senior English class as her classmates listen with her.

Juniors get excited about the life of Henry David Thoreau on their field trip to Walden Pond organized by Mrs. Webster and Ms. Lynch.

Math

Littleton High School realizes that contemporary society puts many demands on the individual person, and they care that incorporated into the math curriculum are fundamental, meaningful, and functional tools that students will use later in their life. Throughout high school, students take either algebra, geometry, or the essentials of mathematics. While later in their high school career they may take Algebra II, Pre Calclus, Trigonometry, and AP or Honors Calculus. Some other mathematical courses offered at Littleton High include Accounting and MCAS Prep.

Seniors Joe Graham and Nicole Puopulo appear to be thoroughly entertained by their Calculus class.

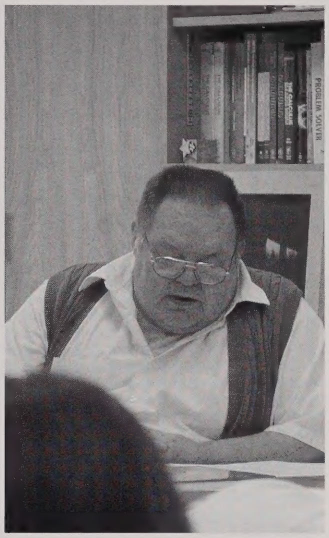
Sophomore Alex Wheaton shows his Alegbra II class what he's made of at the board. Students enjoy challenging each other at the board by using newly learned skills.

Seniors Eric Jackson and Sophy Tuttle play a friendly game of Monopoly in Ms. Rich's Accounting course, one of many exciting opportunities for fun.

Mrs. Manning's senior math class shows their enjoyment as their explore math in all aspects of nature. Many math classes have special outward bound lessons.



Mr. Turner instructs one of his classes. This is Mr. Turner's last year at Littleton, and he will be missed by all.

Freshman Cathy Bowen demonstrates a problem on the board for her geometry class. This course is directed by Ms.Berlinger.

Senior Steve Higgins and Mrs. Manning discuss a problem on a graphing calculator. Students are often encouraged to try to experience the problem for themselves.

Amber Chambers concentrates on her quiz in her math class. In this class, she will learn about equation solving, graphing and rational expressions.

History

The social studies curriculum enables Littleton students to familiarize themselves with the historical development of their cultures and the cultures of others, as well. Carefully included in the history classes at LHS are skills for students to interpret different societys' social structures, economic systems, and political organization. Freshman take History of the Non-Western World. Sophomore year entails Modern European History, while junior year offers US History. Lastly, during senior year, students often take Senior Seminar. Psychology, You and the Law, and Economics are also offerred.

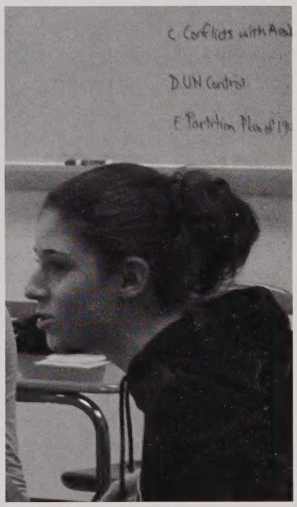
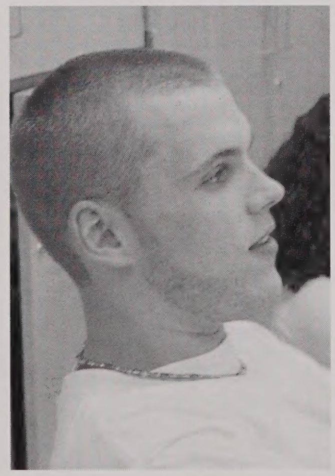
Junior girls in U.S. History listen intently to Ms. Lynch's lecture. Academic U.S. History covers the Civil War to the present.

Kayleigh Gilbert participates in a group discussion in History of the Non-Western World. Covered here are many people and different cultures.



PSYCHOLOGY
AÉROPOSTALE

Senior Psychology students enjoy a photo opportunity while learning about the thought processes of the human mind.



Senior Matt Saylor listens during his Psychology. There is no required social studies course for Seniors, but there are several electives they may take.

"Science is improving lives and saving lives." -- Matt Coole

Science

The science curriculum at Littleton High School is careful to incorporate courses that let students engage their science related inquiries in the way of a scientist or technologist. It is common early in high school for students to take either the courses of Earth Science and Biology. Typically, Sophomores and Juniors take the chemistry course offered. In the last years of high school, students have the choice of taking a science course that they care about. Some of these courses include Chemistry II, Physics, AP Biology, and Environmental Science. It seems that students thoroughly care about the science courses they choose

Deep in thought are Seniors Danielle Van Molle, Andrea Sarvela, and Erick Clerico as they dissect a pig specimen. Anatomy students tend to like this chapter.

Jen Morse prepares to release her mouse trap car, hoping to win the race. The mouse trap car unit is a much anticipated unit in Physics.

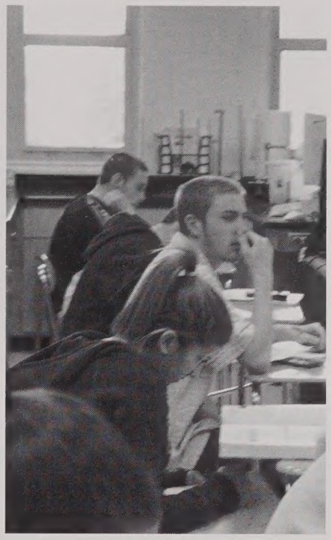
Freshman Sebastian Pilliteri take a break from Mr. McAnaney' biology lesson to look at the camera Nick Pickering continues to lear about the processes of mitosis an meiosis.

Another sly smirk crosses Senior Steve Higgins' face as he listens to Mrs.Leonard's Anatomy lesson. Anatomy is a common class for students aspiring to work in the field of medicine.



While listening intently, Junior Matt Gates soaks up the many aspects of the periodic chart. Chemistry students learn about elements and their effects on the world.

Apparently intrigued by the specimen, Junior anatomy students Danielle Schnaper and Catrina Cavanaugh continue the work assigned. Pig dissecting is an interesting and fun unit in Anatomy.

Foreign Language

Littleton High School gives students the chance to take participate in a foreign language of their choice. Listening, speaking, reading, and writing are the four skills in foreign languages that are stressed to the highest degree. Students are taught the different elements of foreign cultures and the connection of these cultures to their own. After completing a foreign language, students are introduced to a wider variety of career choices and are able to communicate fluently with people from other cultures.

Following along on today's lesson, Billy Brule is ready to learn. Spanish is a widely taken course by many students.

It is obvious that Junior Jenna Cantino is entranced by verb conjugation. What a funny girl!

Sophomore Andy Marchese studiously reads over today's lesson and activites. Both Spanish and French require hard work and determination.

"I really enjoy taking time from my rigorous educational schedule to have fun exercising and being healthy."—Michelle Serio

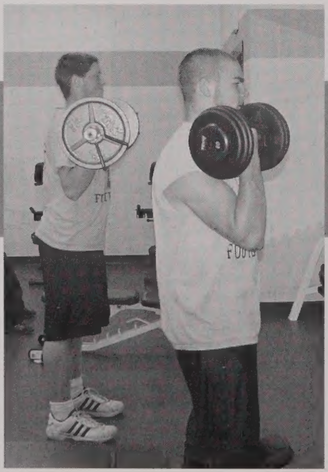
Special Education and Wellness

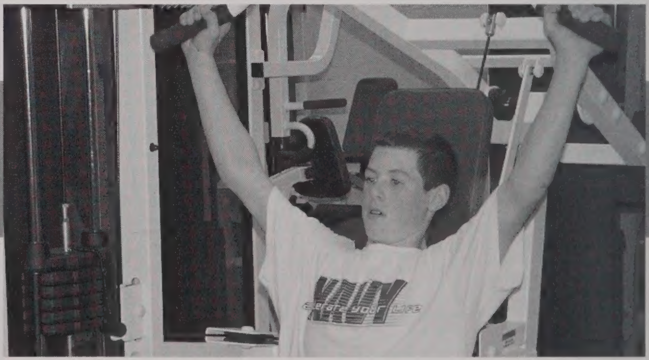
A wide variety of activites and learning experiences are offered to students enrolled in the wellness program. These learning activities, which include team sports, fitness training, and health, develop an individual's physical, intellectual, emotional, and social well-being. The predominant goal of wellness is to establish life-long habits that will help them maintain the optimal level of personal health. Special Education, on the other hand, is designed to give students the help they need to achieve thier goals. Special Education encourages students to acheive their fullest academic potential.

During a gym class, these sophomores and freshmen exercise by playing some basketball, a favorite game for many.

Showing his muscle-man strength, Ricky Axtman, a sophomore, works out. Weightlifting is a common after school activity.

Pat Trahman
School Nurse





To keep in shape for football, Juniors Josh Leger and Matt Moniz work with the barbells. Football players commonly follow a weightlifting schedule.

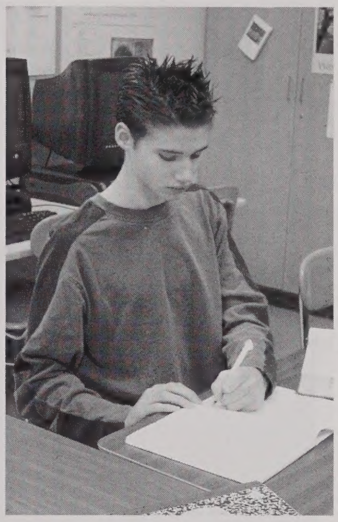
While at the nurse's office, Sarah Deveau takes a break from all the studying she does for the classes she takes during the day. This is a place to regain strength.



Concentrating on his studies, Billy Oder strives to improve his grades through hard work and determination. Today, he writes a paper for one of his many classes.

Art, Music, and Library

Art programs aim to enable students to become better in observing and interpreting the world around them. There is an emphasis on building skills that are necessary for visual communication and creative problem-solving. On the other hand, music education incorporates assisting students to achieve their individual capacity and appreciate music, while understanding the aesthetic effect of music. Lastly, the library is a fundamental tool that students use throughout the school days. The library provides invaluable resources on all subjects to aid students working on a variety of projects.

Senior Pep Band members say goodbye to fans as they play at their last football game on Thanksgiving Day.

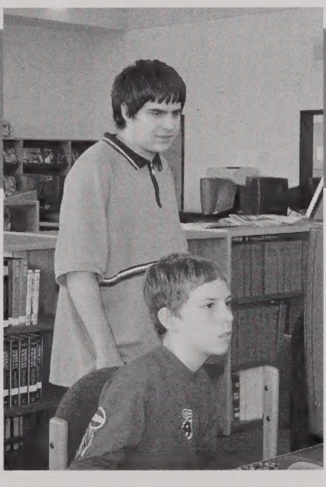
Senior Art Majors focus on a model, then make a quick and accurate sketch. In this course students focus on preparing a portfolio.



Junior Jacob Carl and Freshman Michael Lahey work on a project in the library. The computers offer aid to all students for many different purposes.

"Computer is important because it helps you learn to type and that is a very important area of learning"-- Chris Morin

New Media and Business Technology

New Media consists of Photography, Interactive Media Design, Digital Filmmaking, and Media and Society. These classes incorporate the use of the latest media tools to produce student-designed projects. Computers are rapidly changing and Business Technology courses are essential for all students in order for them to stay current. Students commonly take Computer Skills & Applications, followed by either Integrated Technology or Desktop Publishing. Accounting and College Accounting are also options.

Kim Hardy and Beth O'Clair, both seniors, have a laugh while at the desk of the infamous Dr. Dermer. In her class, students learn through the use of some of the latest technology.

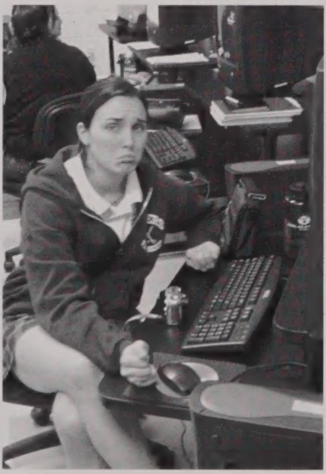
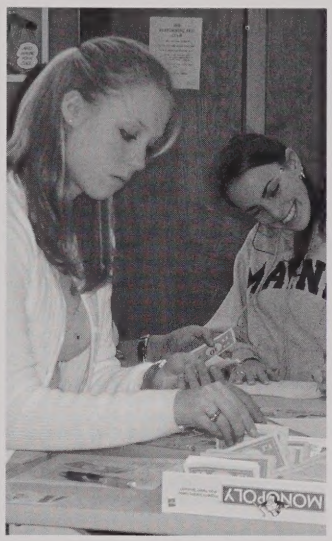
Senior Sophy Tuttle stares intently at her computer screen, contemplating the wonderful aspects of computerized accounting.



Jenn Anthony is upset with her computer--it ate her project! Maybe that is why technology teachers constantly tell us to save often!

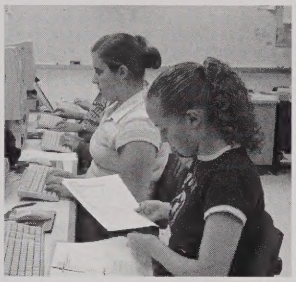
Danielle Hunt and Rebecca Rooks work on simulations in Accounting class. This is a popular math class with juniors and seniors.

Freshman Emily Bulger, a student in Ms. Rich's computer class, studiously works on her typing skills. Students who take this class experience great results.



Nicole Puopolo strategically plans her next move in Accounting Monopoly. Students must apply proper accounting procedures while playing the game.

Sophomores Amanda Bossman and Lisa Knowles spend time working on their Computer Skills Portfolio, the final project for this class.



Seniors Chris Billingham and Shane Melone obviously seem bewildered by Dr. Dermer's instructions. Nevertheless, students rave about this class.

Love, Dad, Mom, Laura, Steven and Stacie

WE CARE!

I can't properly put into words why I think this class cares. When it comes down to it, we care because there are things to care about. We care about the future generations of LHS graduates, we care about how this school works into the fabric of our town, and we care about each other. Every single person in this class, whether they would admit it or not, cares deeply about every experience they've had at Littleton High School. To quote the famous German philosopher, Dr. Klaus Van Austrum, "Every experience in life will undoubtedly affect every subsequent experience a person will have. Our experiences are the limitations of our consciousness, we are all bound by them"(Van Austrum 356). Dr. Van Austrum's theory rings true in every aspect of life and, in my opinion, especially high school. All of the people we have encountered, and the knowledge we have obtained here at Littleton High School will invariably aid us for the rest of our existence. Long story short: we care.

—Andrew Thibeault,
Class of 2004

The yearbook staff would like to extend its thanks and appreciation to Regina Chaple, Lisa Richard, John Neister, John Buckey, Robert Desaulniers, the secretarial staff, Stephanie Oder, Kim Scantlebury, Rabecca Nichols, Greg Mauro, Chad Elliott, Hockmeyer Studios, Jostens, our advertisers, and the community. Together, we have endured through good times and bad times to create something unforgettable.

Thank you.
